Mobilize Staff Of Doctors at Ludwigshafen

Entire Corps of French Army On Rhine Rushed to the Stricken Territory

CAUSE NOT KNOWN

Officials Ignorant as to Reason for Such a Terrific Explosion

BY FRANK E. MASON
Staff Correspondent I. N. S.

BERLIN, Sept. 22—The entire medical staff of the French army of occupation on the Rhine arrived at Ludwigshafen today to assist in treating the vast numbers of persons who were injured in the gigantic explosion which wrecked the plant of the Badische Analin Fabric compan at Oppau with total loss of life estimated at 1,200.

About two thousand persons were injured. All the hospitals in Ludwigshafen and Mannheim are crowded and scores of public buildings and private houses have been converted into hospitals.

General Degoutte, commander in chief of the French army of occupation and a detachment of French troops have arrived on the scene to assist the Germans in relief work.

Hundreds of families are homeless.

Following an investigation the Badische Analin Fabric company issued a statement saying that the blast had occurred in a warehouse containing 200 tons of ammonium sulphate. The exast cause is not yet known.

The little suburb of Oppau, on the Rhine, was a scene of desolation and woe. A scene of miles around bore evidence of the terrific force of the explosion.

Doctors, ambulances and medical supplies have been rushed to Ludwigshafen from all the nearby cities.

Thousands of workmen, volunteers and soldiers are engaged in searching the wreckage of the factory and the home for more bodies.

Temporary morgues have been erected around the scene of the explosion and today the present scenes of pathos. Frantic women besieged the buildings searching for missing fathers, husbands, brothers and sons.

Police guards had been established around the morgue and it was all they could do to hold back the screaming, weeping, surging masses. Every family in the wrecked town had suffered bereavement and many persons far distant from the scene had been killed either by the shock or by flying debris.

Many of the bodies were so badly torn and mangled that identification was impossible. It is expected a public funeral will be held for these.

Some victims were blown to pieces,

$500,000,000 In Income Tax Paid

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22—Uncle Sam's strong boxes were $500,000,000 better off today, after the income tax collections for the third quarter. This sum has been deposited at federal reserve banks from the offices of collectors of internal revenue all over the country. Several more days will elapse before all the revenues thus paid in will reach the treasury.

Treasury officials today said that the final tabulation of receipts on September 15, probably will show greatly in excess of $525,000,000 paid by taxpayers.

Coal Crisis Faces Nation, Say Experts

Grave Situation is Predicted Within the Next Sixty Days

PRODUCTION DROPS

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22—The gravest coal crisis confronting the nation in years is due within the next 60 days, experts forcasted today.

Nothing short of a coal famine during the coming winter faces the middle west and northwest which are supplied by the bituminous coal fields acording to present indications.

The weekly production of bituminous coal has been nearly 2,500,000 tons short of normal. Added to this shortage is the problem of transportation. When "rush season" begins which will be about the middle or end of October the railroads will not have enough cars to move coal to supply the demand, it is predicted.

"From then on it will be a question of transportation," said John B. Pratt of the National Coal association today." A most serious situation will arise. There has been a shortage of cars for the past three years. There is no possibility of the railroads getting enough cars to supply the demand for winter coal. In the middle west and northwest it will be impossible to relieve the suffering that will result, for the householder will be affected as well as industries and public utilities. There will not be enough coal moved according to the present outlook to keep street car and electric light plants going, not to mention industries that may be operating.

"I speak only of the bituminous coal situation. We urged the public all summer to lay in their winter coal supply, knowing this critical situation would arise. All summer the railroads had cars available to move coal but the lack of demand continued. If coal prices are high now, they are bound to be higher when winter comes."

And according to all predictions, sky high prices will prevail.

"Prices always rise when there is a shortage in any commodity," said Pratt. "It is the retail dealer, however, who fixes the price of coal for the consumer, not the wholesaler, and the retailers can forecast the size of the householder's coal bill the coming

To Push Clocks Back An Hour Here on Sunday

Standard Time to be Resumed At 2 A. M. as Official Time of Borough

NO R. R. CHANGE YET

Local Station Not in Recepit of Any New Schedule For Trains

Daylight saving time in Bristol ceases at two o'clock Ante Meridian next Sunday, June 25th. Clocks will be turned back one hour on that date and the activities of the borough will again be gauged by Standard Time, until two o'clock Ante Meridian on the first Sunday in June of next year, unless legislation to the contrary is enacted.

This is in accordance with an ordinance enacted by Borough Council May 31st.

ith the resumption of Standard Time the clocks in Bristol will correspond with those of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the trouble of figuring an hour difference in time will cease.

Daylight saving time this year has proved a popular innovation in Bristol. Especially has this been true to those employed in the various industrial establishments. More baseball and other twilight and door sports have been engaged in this season in Bristol than ever before.

With the moving of the clocks back an hour on Sunday the Standard Time of Bristol will conform with the Standard Time of all adjacent communities. Some of the rural towns in this section are still operating on Standard Time and as commutters travel back and forth considerable confusion has resulted.

Before you go to bed Saturday night turn your clock and watches back one hour.

The Bristol post office will move its clocks back an hour to conform with the Standard Time going into effect on Sunday. It will not be necessary to change the schedule for the arrival and departure of the mails, because the hour will remain the same after clocks are set back one hour.

Collections of mail from the sub stations and the street boxes will be carried on just as usual. The moving of the clock will not in any way change these.

It was stated at the Bristol station of the Pennsylvania railroad today that as yet no official notice of any change in the schedule of trains had been received here.

Miss Elizabeth Black Weds Edw. C. Tomlinson

Yesterday afternoon at one o'clock Miss Elizabeth Black, niece of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Wood, of Bensalem was married at the Wood home to Mr. Edward C. Tomlinson, of Morrisville. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. White of the Eddington Presbyterian church.

Miss Black is well known in Bristol She has been engaged for some time as cashier at the Mill street store of the American Stores Company and at one time was employed at the P. R. R. passenger station here.

The bride wore a dress of white crepe meteor and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses. She was attended by Miss Margaret Humes, of Philadelphia, who wore pink satin and carried bouquet of pink roses.

The best man was Andrew Allen, of Morrisville.

Little Frances Benner and Eleanore White were flower girls.

After the ceremony the couple went for a tour of Niagara Falls and New York state.

County Humane Societies To Meet At Newtown

Public meeting of Bucks County Federated Humane Societies will be held at George School on October 8th at 2.30 o'clock.

Shipping Board Decides Not To Rescind Eviction Orders

Townsite Heating Plant Not to Reopen. Tenants of Bungalows Thus Heated To Move Into Houses Having Own Heaters.

The order to close the townsite heating plant of Harriman is not to be rescinded. The plant will remain closed and heat will not be be furnished to the less than 100 tenants, who now live in the houses which get heat from the central heating plant of the townsite.

The families still living in the houses which are heated from the townsite heating plant will move into unoccupied houses which are provided with individual heating plants. Several of these families have already moved.

These facts were learned today when Mr. William Towers, Manager of Transportation and Housing of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, confirmed them to a Courier representative.

"The townsite heating plant will not be reopened," said Mr. Towers. "The families now living in those houses which depend upon the plant for heat will be taken care of in vacant houses, equipped with their own heating plants."

It is said that there are less than 100 families now living in the properties effected by the closing of the heating plant.

Order to close the heating plant which furnished the heat and hot water to the 124 tenants followed a visit to Harriman by Chief Engineer Garwood of the Philadelphia office of the E. F. C. He visited the townsite on August 1st and after making a survey of the houses thus heated, called a conference for August 8th, at the Philadelphia office. He placed the facts learned by his investigation before the conferees and it was decided that as a matter of economy the townsite heating plant should not be opened this winter.

The cost of operation, Mr. Garwood laid before the conferees, is $4,000 per month, including necessary repairs to boilers. The approximate amount of income from the 124 houses is $1,400 per month. It was said that only sixty-three of the 124 houses were on what is called the "active list," which means that the current rent is paid up to date. Some of the others were said to be far in arrears.

Eviction notices were served on the tenants to became effective on or before September 30th.

Tenants effected began at once the circulation of petitions which were liberally signed. The business men of the townsite and the residents not effected by the order signed sympathetic petitions, which were forwarded to Washington to the officers of the Shipping Board.

A public mass meeting was held in the Harriman school house on the evening of August 15th, when vigorous protest was made against the issuance of the ejectment notices. The matter was laid before the officials of the Shipping Board at Washington by Congressman Watson and they again went over the facts in the case, but it was determined that the decision of Mr. Garwood and Mr. Towers "that as a matter of economy the plant should not be reopened," was right. Hence the decision not to rescind the order.

To Teach Poultry Culling In County

Farm Agent, N. E. Garber, to Have Poultry Expert to Visit County

DATES ARE ARRANGED

Realizing the importance of culling the poultry flock, County Agent N. E. Garber, has secured the services of P. L. Sanford, poultry specialist from the Pennsylvania State College, to conduct a campaign to have poultry keepers sell the poor, low-producing hens and keep only the hens that will return a profit.

On the following dates—September the 27th, 28th, 29th, and 30th—12 demonstrations will be given. Everyone attending will be given an opportunity to handle the birds and thus get actual experience in culling poultry. In teaching culling, the best results are obtained when the farmers actually handle the birds under the direction of the poultry specialist. All those attending the meeting should come prepared to handle the hens. The demonstrations will be conducted on the following farms on the date and hour mentioned below. (The hour mentioned below is standard time.)

September the 27th, 1921.

Milford Square, 9.00 A. M., Brookview Farm, G. W. Cole, Milford Square, Pa.

Stabs Friend Three Times In Dispute Over A Card Game

Convention Loses By 249 Thus Far

Seventy-one Districts to Report Show the Proposition Was Defeated

DOYLESTOWN FAVORS

Returns from 71 of the 95 election districts in Bucks County to thus far report at Doylestown, show the vote on the Constitutional Convention was defeated by 249. The total number in these 71 districts voting "Yes" was 1696 while the total voting "No" was 1945.

No figures are available from the other 24 districts in the county, because the election officers sent in their returns sealed up. Under the law these returns cannot be opened except by the court.

The County Commissioners will begin the official count of the Primary vote this afternoon.

A total of 458 Democrats in Bucks County voted "Yes" on the Constitutional Convention while 132 voted "No".

In East Springfield township not a single vote was polled either way on the question of hold a convention. Doylestown borough favored holding a Constitutional Convention by a majority of 101. Three out of four wards in Quakertown favored it by a majority of 79.

Several Socialists and Prohibitionists voted against holding the convention. Sellersville and Perkasie polled a number of votes against the convention on the Socialist and Prohibition ballots. Five Prohibitionists in Doylestown voted against it.

League Of Nations Admits Three More

GENEVA, Sept. 22—The league of nations assembly today voted to admit Esthonia, Lithuania and Latvia to the league.

Charles Jos. Doherty, head of the Canadian delegation told the committees on covenant Amendments, Canada will continue to oppose artile 10 "because it guarantees the members of the league permanent possession of the territory they now held regardless of the justice of their possessions."

Mr. Doherty did not refer to Ireland, but said if covenant had been in effect before the war " it is obvious that Germany would have held Alsace forever."

John Damore Alleged to Have Attacked Mike Salustio On Wood Street

POLICE GIVE CHASE

Officers Capture Fugitive as He Flees Through Harriman

John Damore, 308 Brooks street is enroute to Bucks County jail this afternoon where he will await trial on the charges of aggravated assault and battery with attempt to kill, at the next term of criminal court. He is held under $1,500 bail on the charges stated.

Damore is alleged to have stabbed Mike Salustio, 312 Grant avenue, early last evening as the result of a dispute over a card game, which is reported to have taken place at 11 Lincoln avenue.

According to the police the two men were among the participants in the card game. A dispute arose and the two went into the street, where it is alleged Damore stabbed Salustio three times with a sharp instrument. It has not been definitely established whether a knife or a razor was used.

Salustio exhibts three cuts—two on one side of his neck and one on the opposite side. The alleged stabbing took place at Wood street and Lincoln avenue at about six o'clock.

After the alleged cutting Damore ran up Wood street and jumped aross Adams Hollow Creek. He continued his flight into Harriman. The police were summoned and Chief Sackville along with officers Hermann and Cummons rushed to the scene.

Every avenue of escape was covered by the officers. The Harriman police were notified and joined in the search. Hermann went into Harriman and Officer Cummons "covered" the Bristol pike, while Chief Sackville in an automobile gave chase to a trolley car which had left Bristol at about the time the man escaped.

Damore was caught in Harriman and placed under arrest by Officer Frazier, assisted by Officer Curtis, of the Harriman police department.

Dr. William C. LeCompte treated the injured man.

Several residents of the Italian section joined in the chase after Damore and shots were fired into the air as he fled.

This morning Damore was given a hearing before Justice Kraft and placed under bail.

Two Placed Under Arrest By Police Here

Carl Fields, colored, was arrested by the police on suspicion last night.

James Abbonizio, 304 Lafayette street, was arrested by the police charged with larceny of a gold watch belonging to Samuel Embisuso, of Pond street.

Arbuckle To Get Hearing Before Jury In Police Court

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 22—Whether or not Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle must face jury trial for murder was to be decided at the preliminary hearing in police court this afternoon.

The hearing was expected to give the first inkling of the defense of Arbuckle against the charge that he, by an attack caused injuries which resulted in the death of Virginia Rappe, "best dressed woman of the movies."

Until today the defense has maintained silence but with the cross examination of witnesses to be placed on the stand by the state in an effort to secure commitment of Arbuckle to trial before the superior court for murder, the battle to free the film star was to be under way.

The morning was spent in feverish preparation for the hearing. Frank Dominguez, chief of counsel for the defense, arrived from Los Angeles and plunged into conference with his associates, Milton Cohen and Charles H. Brennan.

On the same train came Al Semnacher, manager of the dead actress, whose stories before a Los Angeles grand jury yesterday caused a new sensation. Semnacher was taken before District Attorney Matthew Brady for further questioning as to his sworn statement that Arbuckle had admitted the commission of an act against Virginia Rappe which might have resulted in her illness.

Arbuckle's alleged admission was made, according to Semnacher, in the presence of Fred Fishback, Lowell Sherman and Harry McCullough.

Fishback has already been questioned and made, according to the district attorney, "an evasive reply."

To newspapermen, however, Fishback passed the lie to Semnacher's statement point blank, denying that Arbuckle had discussed in his presence what took place in the hotel room.

Lowell Sherman, apparently still eluded the detectives.

No word has been received from Sherman by District Attorney Brady since he left a train bound for New York City. A report was current here that Sherman was enroute for Europe when he left Los Angeles for the east.

District Attorney Brady, however, was of the opinion that Sherman will return as a witness. Should he fail to do so voluntarily, it was intimated an indictment will bring about his extradition.

Harry McCullough, Arbuckle's chauffeur was to be questioned regarding his knowledge of the alleged Arbuckle admission.

Brady planned a brisk presentation of his case against Arbuckle. He anticipated one full day would enable him to lay his case before Police Judge Lazarus. As an evidence that he expected the defense to make strenuous efforts to free Arbuckle at this hearing was shown by his estimate that the "defense might take two days.

Defense Attorneys made no estimate.

Judge Lazarus, before whom the case was heard, had three courses open to him after hearing the evidence:

1. Hold the prisoner for trial for murder.

2. Hold him for trial on any degree of murder, including manslaughter.

3. Dimiss all charges against Arbuckle. This would not affect the manslaughter indictment pending.

Soviet Russia To Negotiate With England and France

BY FRANK E. MASON
Staff Correspondent I. N. S.
Copyright 1921 by I. N. S.

BERLIN, Sept. 22—Soviet Russia intends to enter into negotiations with England and France for a settlement of the national debts which Russia contracted in those countries under the olr czarist regime, Leonid Krassin, Bolshevik trade commissioner, told the International News Service today.

In the most important interview that has ever come from an official of the Moscow government, M. Krassin outlined the following plans and hopes of the soviet:

1—Construct an irrigation system in the Volga district to assist agriculture and prevent a recurrence of famine such as Russia is now suffering.

2—Rehabilitate the nation commercially, industrially and agriculturally as the United States was "reconstructed" after the Civil war.

3—Meet foreign debts and restore the normal value of Russian money.

4—Secure vast supplies outside of Russia through long time credits.

M. Krassin admitted that the Russian rouble the value of which before the war was 50 cents in United States money, has depreciated 15,000 times. This means that 300 paper Russian roubles could now be purchased in Russia for the value of one American cent.

The soviet official was seen at the soviet embassy, recently opened in Berlin for trade and diplomatic purposes. At the outset he produced a book and as he tapped the back of it with his finger he exclaimed:

"Here are plans to prevent a recurrence of the Volga famine. Such famines were recurrent under the czars. We intend to build canals and dams to retain the water of the winter snows which will insure a rotation of crops. Before the work can be done we must purchase excavating machinery, truks, tractors, road rollers and concrete mixers.

"The question of making payment is a difficult one. A vast tract of the land is exhausted as a result of warfare. Recent strife on the Polish and Finnish borders caused the destruction of highways, railroads and such works in many sections. We need a breathing space.

"Our position is similar to that of the United States after the civil war. We hope to come back in similar style But it is absolutely necessary to improve agriculture. I think that the psychology of our people is such that after times of greaat stress, such as we have passed through our productivity will be greater than ever before.

"As a rule we shall want long time credits, at least five years; and longer for large sums.

"The question of national loans will arise when we sit at the green table with France and England to arrange our state debt. We have already offerer ores and naptha concessions.

"Branches of foreign banks will not

STATE REGULATION

One of the speakers at a recent township taxpayers' mass meeting on a school question uttered the apt slogan, "Too Much Harrisburg." His meaning was that there was too much control and supervision over local school affairs exercised by the state department of education.

A perusal of the bulletin issued by the Bristol school board, which appeared on the first page of last Tuesday's issue of the Courier, seems to bear him out. It actually seems to suggest that the State usurps more control over the schools than is warranted by the amount of aid it gives.

Restrictions and stipulations of many kinds are imposed upon the school board by the state educational authorities. Of course, this control is fully authorized by the statutes, but it hardly seems fair that the taxpayers and parents of a community are allowed so little discretion in the expenditure of the school money whose great bulk they pay.

Tuesday's bulletin shows very clearly the drawbacks the Bristol school board labors under in endeavoring to administer the borough school affairs to the best interests of the taxpayers and the pupils. The local board hardly seems able to move without being faced by some state restriction. Added to that, the state authoritatively stipulates just how almost every cent of the school funds shall be spent.

A seemingly unjust phase of the situation is that the state despotically orders certain things done with the school funds for which the local school board, or the township taxpayers, gets little if any credit.

The salary rate, for instance, is set by the state authorities and the state gets the credit for paying the teachers good wages, whereas only an infinitesimal part of the money by means of which the state gets this credit comes out of the state's coffers.

The state also gets all the credit for another teachers' welfare project, while contributing but little or nothing toward it. This is the teachers' retirement fund.

Truly, with all this state regulation, the school board has a hard task.

HISTORY PROBLEMS

As Chicago has decided quasi-officially that Mrs. O'Leary's cow did not start the conflagration which destroyed Chicago in 1871, St. Louis is upset with a discussion as to whom was its founder. It took Chicago fifty years to acquit the cow of kicking over the lamp and absolve Mrs. O'Leary of complicity in the catastrophe. The question of the foundation of St. Louis has not been in doubt for a hundred years, at least as far as public information and interest go, but is now made a direct issue by one of the city's first families.

The modern Chicago has been advertised as the great city which a cow's kick built, and it is deplorable, indeed, that the credited legend and characteristic-boast have to be discarded. Mrs. O'Leary's obstreperous cow for a half of a century, has been as widely known as the World's Fair, the Stock Yards, the Chicago river and Fort Dearborn.

Chicago will celebrate the semi-centennial of the fire on October 10. There will be a reproduction of the conflagration as a spectacle. A committee which has investigated the cause of the calamity reports that Mrs. O'Leary was sick abed on the day and evening of the fire and she could not have gone to the stable with a lamp, and, as she did not put the lamp on the chair in the stable, the cow could not have kicked the lamp over and started the fire which burned Chicago to the ground. Mrs. O'Leary, her stable, her lamp and her celebrated cow will be omitted from the re-enactment of the disaster.

St. Louis was founded by Pierre Laclede Liguest, a Frenchman. Laclede selected the site for his settlement, and returned to France, leaving his colleague, Auguste Chouteau, to build the town. Descendants of Chouteau maintain that he should be recognized as the founder. The professor of history in St. Louis University suggests a compromise by honoring Chouteau as co-founder.

Were Laclede to be divested wholly of his fame, St. Louis would have to remove several costly statues and pictures of him. Chicago has not erected a monument to the O'Leary cow, but the annals and chronicles of the city have to be revised, and there will be some trouble and expense in disposing of a myth which has amused the country since Chicago began to grow and brag.

ORDERS MEN RE-INSTATED

Has an employe vested right to his employment? May he be discharged by his employer with or without cause? Do fidelity, efficiency, and length of service, give an employe a tangible interest in his position; or, may the employer disregard these considerations and dispense with a workman's services without the least moral responsibility?

The United States Railroad Board has ordered the Butler County Railroad, a small Missouri carrier, to reinstate two men whom it had discharged because they belonged to the same union as the men working under them. The board states that it is fully aware that its ruling that men cannot be released without cause is contrary to the supreme Court decision that a corporation has the right to discharge men as it sees fit, but the board construes its duty to be to settle every case justly and reasonably, irrespective of the legal rights of either side.

Inferentially, the board assumes that the Supreme Court decision may not apply to the transportation service, or, at least, not to every case in this service. In any event, the board holds that its sphere of duty is governed specifically by equity.

The question of the vested right of a faithful employe in a service with which he has been connected for some time is a labor problem which is receiving much thought from employers. Preponderating opinion seems to be that employers may gain as much benefit as employes by conceding to the latter permanent collateral interest in business. That there are many instances in which the vested right of employes must exist appears to be undeniable.

Men who give many years of service to a company, or their lives to an industry, are human fixtures of the company or the business. The profounder that the deliberation of this problem is the more certain it appears that law cannot cover all phases of it. There are ethical principles and humanitarian ideals involved which give countenance to the normal claim of workmen to vested right of some kind and degree.

Senator Smoot insists on simplification of taxation. All right. But don't simplify it on the consumer.

The Massachusetts Commission on Necessaries of Life estimates that a four cent doughnut nets the baker a profit of 300 per cent. At that, the profit is, in many cases, the eaters' gain. The hole in the doughnut is the escape of indigestion.

"I'll SWEAR I PUT THAT CAT OUT"

BY MORRIS

The Stroller

HUMAN INTEREST ITEMS GATHERED ABOUT TOWN AND ITS PEOPLE

Two young men from the fourth ward on Thursday were among the visitors to Doylestown. They went up to the county seat with others but after leaving the Court House met two members of the female sex.

That was the last seen of the pair until the next day. They have been trying to explain every since to their many friends why they remained in the count seat such a long time.

Much gossip is heard about town these days concerning the married man, who was seen strolling along the boardwalk, at Atlantic City with another woman. It seems like a lot of fuss about a very small matter.

Howard Thornton uses the hunt system in typewriting, he says. He spends most of the time hunting for the proper key.

There are a lot of automobilists who make an effort to get either oil or gasoline in Bristol late at night without paying for it.

This trick has been tried more than once on the night man at one of the local garages. The other night the seven men, who were arrested and later charged with stealing an auto in Philadelphia tried the trick. They drove up in front of a certain garage and got oil and then drove off.

Police officer Fred Hermann, always on the job and alert for violators of the law, was close by and gave chase leaping on the running board of the car with drawn gun. The seven halted and when listed at the police station, it was learned from a circular sent out, that all seven were wanted for stealing the Philadelphia machine.

Go to it Hermann!

Two members of the clergy of Bristol approached the writer since last Saturday and favorably commented upon the address delivered by Charles E. Scott at the dedication of the memorial shaft.

Both have said that the speech was the best they have heard recently. They praised Mr. Scott's oratory and were deeply impressed with the sentiment of his remarks.

We wonder what old Dr. Osler would say if he heard Bristol's veteran speaker orating on Saturday. Perhaps he would have gone back on his theory of chloroforming men who have passed the age of 40.

He said to himself that it was awkward—he did not know how he could enter that door and talk to Cherry. And yet he knew that that meeting of Cherry, that the common exchange of words and glances, that the daily trifling encounters with Cherry were all poignantly significant now.

He felt no impulse toward hurry. He might sit on his porch another hour, might saunter off toward the creek. It mattered nothing; the hour was steadily approaching when she must reappear.

Alix drove in, full of animated apologies. She managed the car far better than he, and no thought of an accident had troubled him.

The evening was warm, one of the two or three warm evenings that marked the height of summer even in the high valley. There was not a breath of air in the garden; roses and wallflowers stood erect in a sort of luminous enchantment. Moonlight sank through the low twisted branches of the near-by oaks and fell tangled with black and lacy shade through the porch rose vine.

Alix sat on the porch rail, every line of crisp skirt and braided head revealed as if by daylight, but Cherry's pale striped gown was only a glimmer in the deepest shade of the vine. Peter, smoking, sat where he could not but see her; they had hardly looked at each other directly since the long, strange look of this afternoon; they had exchanged hardly a word.

"Town tomorrow, Pete?" Alix said, after a silence during which she had locked her arms behind her head, stared straight above her at the path the moon was making through faint stars, and yawned. "I've got to go in to a meeting of the hospital board. Good night, beloveds. I'm dead. Don't sit out here mooning with Pete all night, Cerise!"

Peter said to himself that now Cherry would go, too, but as the screen door banged lightly after Alix, and the dull glimmer of Cherry's striped gown did not move in the soft shadow, a sudden reluctance and distaste seized him. He had been subconsciously aware of her all afternoon; he had known a delicious warmth and stir at his heart that he had not analyzed, if indeed it could be analyzed. Now suddenly he did not want the beauty and gloom and charm of that feeling touched. His heart began to beat heavily again, and he knew that he must stop the unavailing game now.

But he had not reckoned on Cherry. She twisted in her chair, and he heard a child's long, happy sigh.

"Oh, so am I tired, too!" she breathed, reluctantly. "I hate to leave it—but I've been almost asleep for half an hour! You can have all the moonlight there is, Peter." Her white figure fluttered toward the door. "Good night!" she said, drooping her little head to choke a yawn. A moment later he heard her laughing with Alix.

'You fool—you fool—you fool!" Peter said to himself, and he felt an emotion like shame, a little real compunction that he could so utterly misread her innocence. He felt it not only wrong in him, but somehow staining and hurtful to her.

CHAPTER XII.

Again Peter reckoned without Cherry. It was only the next day, when he was entering the Palace court for his lunch, that he experienced a sudden and violent emotion. His thoughts were, at the moment, far from Cherry, and he fancied himself in a hurry. But every other feeling but excitement was obliterated at the sight of a slender, girlishly made woman, in a pongee gown, and a limp brown hat covered with poppies, waiting in the lounge.

Peter went toward her, and the color rushed into Cherry's face. It was the first time they had accidentally encountered each other, and it had a special place of its own in the history of their lives.

The surprise of it kept them laughing, hands clasped, for a minute; then Cherry said:

"I was to lunch here with Mary Cameron. But she's full twenty minutes late! You hate her, don't you?" she added, looking up from under the poppies at Peter.

"I don't like her," he admitted, with a boy's grimace.

"Then suppose we don't lunch here?" Cherry suggested, innocently. Peter laughed joyously, and tucking her little gloved hand under his arm, led her away. They went to Solari's, and had a window table, and nodded, as they discussed their lunch, at half a dozen friends who chanced to be lunching there, too.

She had said that she wanted to tell him "all about it," and Peter, with quick knowledge that she meant the unhappiness of her marriage, nodded a grave permission.

"I've made a failure of it!" Cherry said, sadly. "I know I ought to struggle on, but I can't. I have no individuality, Peter. I have no personality! As for my dignity—my privacy——"

Her face was scarlet, and for a moment she stopped speaking.

"Just tell me an alternative!" she said, after a while. "It can't be that there is no other life for me than going back. Peter, I'm only twenty-four!"

"I know you are," he said, with a brief nod.

"Why, every one has some alternative," Cherry pleaded. "It can't be that marriage is the only—the only irrevocable thing! If you had a partner that you couldn't go on with, you could come to some agreement!"

"You don't love him!" Peter said.

"I don't hate him," she answered quickly. "Indeed I don't. And it isn't just the place and the life, Peter! I could be happy in two rooms—somewhere—anywhere—— But not—with him. Oh, Peter, if I hadn't done it—"

Her beauty, as she pushed her plate aside and leaned toward him, was so startling that Peter, a lighted match half-raised to a fresh cigarette, put the match down aimlessly and looked thoughtfully at the cigarette, and laid that down, too, without the faintest consciousness of what he was doing. The day was warm, and there was a little dampness on her white forehead, where the gold hair clung to the brim of the drooping hat. The soft curve of her chin, the babyish shortness of her upper lip, and the crimson sweetness of the little earnest mouth had never seemed more lovely than they were today. She was youth incarnate, palpitating, [illegible] unspoiled.

Two Florida darkies were watching a balloon ascension. The younger darky looked up at the big bag in amazement and then said:

"I wonder what keeps that balloon up in the air that-a-way?

"Well," replied the older darky, "it is caused by various causes. Sometimes it is caused by one cause and then, again, it is caused by another cause."

New Pictures by Radio.

"Very interesting and very important," is the way Marconi recently expressed himself regarding the transmission of photographs by radio. It appears that several systems of this kind are being worked out at present. "I have not followed the experiments, but I know it can be done," continued Marconi. "Pictures were sent over telegraph wires several years ago, and what can be done by wire can be done by wireless. It will be of great interest to watch the progress made. The two chief uses to which the discovery can be put are the quick transmission of photographs for newspaper and police purposes." — Scientific

THEATRES

Forrest Theatre

The beautiful Yosemite Valley, one of the famous garden spots of the world formed the background for many of the exterior scenes filmed for Wallace Reid's latest Paramount picture "The Love Special," which will be presented at the Forrest theatre tonight.

Mr. Reid and his company under the direction of Frank Urson, went to the location where they remained for more than a week getting the necessary "shots" and when the company returned to the studio, a replica of the interior of the inn was made.

The new picture, which is an adaptation by Eugene B. Lewis of "The Daughter of a Magnate," a story by Frank H. Spearman is a big, outdoor production on the order of "The Valley of the Giants," in which Mr. Reid starred two years ago. In this he plays the role of a railroad construction engineer—a real man, big virile and thoroughly western. The delightful romance is enhanced by the presence of Agnes Ayres in the leading role. Miss Ayres will be recalled in several recent notable productions, including "Held By the Enemy," "The Furnace" and "Forbidden Fruit."

Others in the cast are Theodore Roberts, Lloyd Whitlock, Sylvia Ashton, Alexander Gaden, Clarence Burton, Ernest Butterworth, Snitz Edwards and Zelma Maja.

New Colonial Theatre

The remarkable story of a man deliberately going to the gallows and sacrificing his life to save that of his rival for the girl both love is the basis of Vitagraph's newest film, "The Birth of a Soul." Harry T. Morey plays the star's role.

It has been declared by eastern reviewers that the supreme sacrifice episode of this picture is distinctly unique. So far as modern records show, the only similar incident in literature is that presented by Sidney Carton in the famous story by Chas. Dickens, entitled "The Tale of Two Cities."

"The Birth of a Soul" will be presented as the feature attraction at the New Colonial theatre tonight. It is made from a scenario by Arthur Edwin Krows, and was specially edited by Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester.

The picture has its settings among the mountains of Kentucky. Its characters are the picturesque mountaineers, or "hill billies," of the region. Mr. Morey is cast in the role of a rough native of the region.

Mr. Morey is surported by an unusually strong cast in "The Birth of a Soul." Jean Paige, his leading woman has risen to a firm foothold as a player of great charm and ability. The other chief characters are the well known players Charles Eldrige, Robert Gaillard, Bernard Siegel and George Cooper.

The people who are loafing around at the summer resorts have ample leisure in which to fret and think about the hot weather.

A Neighbor's Plan

One of your friends is quietly building up a snug little fortune. You will be surprised some day and wonder how he did it.

But it is a very simple story.

This man does not have a large income. He has never made a large savings deposit in his life. Small deposits made every week is the secret of this man's success. His savings account shows a steady climb for years.

The average man fails to win because he is not willing to make small savings deposits and make them as often as possible.

Most any one can see the importance of making a big deposit—but many fail to understand the value of the small ones.

Think it over. ONE DOLLAR WILL START A SAVINGS ACCOUNT WITH US.

making it uncertain that the exact number of killed will be known unless they are checked up through the company payroll.

Relief workers had a grewsome task. As they tore through the mass of wreckage they came upon human legs and arms and bodies from which the heads had been torn.

Graphic stories were told by survivors. They said there was a dull roar, followed by a burst of flame and then a terrific detonation which shook the earth like an earthquake. Enormous clouds of black and greenish smoke rolled upwards in clouds.

The seismograph instruments in the schools at Stuttgart, sixty miles away, recorded tremors similar to those made by an earthquake.

Three hundred residents of Mannheim, were killed and 200 were injured.

After the explosion living workmen fled covered with blood and grime, fighting their way through the thick clouds of chemical fumes. Many of them were naked as they had just completed bathing after their shift in the works when the explosion occurred.

Iron gates in the plant were torn to pieces like paper. Strong wooden beams were reduced to toothpicks. Enormous steel tanks were crushed together and blew up like a line of exploding soap bubbles.

Farmers in their fields two miles from the plant were killed by the shock.

The war time bombardments of Oppau, Mannheim and Ludwigshafen by allied aviators were nothing compared to the explosion of yesterday.

There were no newspapers in Mannheim today. The plants had been damaged by the blast.

Late dispatches estimate the total damage at 200,000,000 marks (normally $48,000,000 in American money) of which 138,000,000 marks is covered by insurance.

At the Mannehim offices of the Badische Anilin Fabric company it was learned that 4,000 tons of salt peter that was stored in the plant had exploded. The salt peter had previously been examined and pronounced safe and "unexplodable."

Oppau was a "war town." It grew up around the dye plant which was erected for the manufacture of poison gas during the war. It was only a few miles from Mannheim and Ludwigshafen.

It was one of the first places where poison gas was manufactured for war purposes and vast amounts of this war material was turned out during the conflict. After the war when the factory was converted back to an aniline dye plant Oppau continued as a thriving little community.

The Badische Anilin Fabric compay (or the Baden Dye works) is the biggest producer of dye in Germany. The plant at Oppau was said to have employed 3,500 persons.

The Red Cross has started relief expeditions for the scene.

Scores of families are camping in the open. Many are cooking their means on the smoking debris. Ammonia fumes penneate the atmosphere.

Many French soldiers were injured. They were on ten French Rhine boats which patrol the river near Mannheim. The French troops, both black and white, are now on duty at Oppau.

Three hundred of the dead have been identified, according to one message from Manheim today.

Soviet Russia To Negotiate On Debt

come into Russia until our currency is convalescent. Russia suffers too many zeros in her currency. The rouble has depreciated about 15,000 times We must cut off the zeros off our money. That will require several years to accomplish. First there must be peace.

"Your young American university technical engineers will be very welcome in Russia two or three years from now, but conditions at the present time are such that it is difficult for foreigners so we must depend upon Russians. Your American factories in Russia—the International Harvester and the Westinghouse——were nationalized. But now they are operating as American factories.

"It is unnecessary for salesmen and purchasing agents to come to Russia. We find a better market and more competition in buying and selling in such places as Berlin where the purchasing agent has full powers. But serious minded business men, working on a great scale, such as Washington D. Vanderlip, are welcome in Russia."

M. Krassin was formerly head of the soviet trade commission in London which concluded an agreement with the British government. He came to Berlin from Riga on Tuesday following a conference at Riga with an Italian commercial envoy. When M. Krassin left Riga for Berlin the Italian envoy departed for Russia.

Coal Crisis Faces Nation, Says Experts

Although the production of anthracite coal has been about normal, the shortage in cars is likely to make the winter uncomfortable and expensive for the householder in those sections using hard coal, and it is said to be most doubtful whether the supply moved will be enough to satisfy demand.

According to Pratt, the slump in soft coal, as shown by the present average weekly output of 7,500,000 tons against the normal average of 10,000,000 tons, means that about half of the industries of the country are paralyzed. A sudden revival of industry would make the situation acute, even with enough cars to move coal, because of this shortage in production.

The production of bituminous coal so far this year is the lowest within five years. It is far below the output of any of the preceding four years. It runs 93,320,000 tons short of production in 1920, according to the latest report of the United States geological survey. It is 43,502,000 tons short of the output in 1919, the lowest production year of the preceding four years.

Parents' Attention

Is your boy or girl contented when at home or does he or she long for the streets? Here is a sollution to keep your growing boy's or girl's mind clean and away from bad company. Get them interested in Foreign Postage Stamps, buy a small collection to start and spent a dollar or two a week on increasing its size and you will find in a short time what a difference it will make, at the same time you will be helping greatly with their education and they will have a pleasing and pleasant pastime. Nice for grown folks too. Ask some of the boys who now collect them. A. W. Glisson, Courier Apartments has a large and good variety always on hand.

Your mother's fruit cake

Good as it is when made, it improves with age. That's the way with VELVET.

The choice sun-ripened Kentucky BURLEY tobacco that's used for VELVET is aged two years in wooden hogsheads until it's rich in mellowness and appetizing taste.

Prove it out in your pipe bowl.
